YOJANA SAHAYAK

Official Government Scheme Sources & Portal Directory

Hackathon research reference | India | Prepared 30 October 2026

Purpose: A categorized starting directory for building a multilingual assistant that helps people discover government schemes, understand eligibility, find application instructions, and identify the official department responsible for each scheme.

Important: This is a practical directory, not a claim that every government scheme or portal is listed. Portal addresses, scheme rules, deadlines, and benefits can change. Verify current details from the latest official scheme guidelines, ministry notifications, FAQs, and application portals before displaying them to users.

How to use this directory

1. Start with the national discovery portals to locate relevant central and state schemes.
2. Use the responsible ministry or department website to find the official guidelines and notifications.
3. Use the scheme-specific portal for application steps, status checks, or beneficiary services where available.
4. Store the source URL, document title, publication/update date, and the date your team last verified the information.

Contents

• National scheme directories and government directories
• Agriculture and farmers
• Finance, banking and insurance
• Housing and urban development

3. Recommended source-verification workflow for Yojana Sahayak

1. Discover: Use myScheme and India.gov.in to identify potentially relevant central and state schemes.

2. Identify the nodal authority: Record the ministry, department, state department, or implementing agency responsible for the scheme.

3. Retrieve primary evidence: Prefer the latest official scheme guidelines/operational guidelines, government notification, ministry FAQ, or official scheme portal.

4. Extract structured facts: Capture eligibility, exclusions, benefits, required documents, application steps, deadlines, state coverage, and grievance contact details.

5. Attach provenance: For every fact, save source title, exact URL, issuing department, publication/update date, access date, and relevant page/section.

6. Check freshness: Re-check time-sensitive details such as application windows, benefit amounts, income limits, and document requirements before answering.

7. Answer cautiously: If a detail is missing or conflicting, say it needs official confirmation and link the user to the responsible authority.

Suggested database fields

Field	What to store
scheme_id / scheme_name	Unique ID and official scheme name level / geography	Central, state, UT; state or district coverage if specified ministry / department	Nodal ministry, department and implementing agency eligibility	Age, income, occupation, category, residence and other conditions
benefits	Benefit type, amount and conditions, with source citation documents	Required documents; mark mandatory vs conditional application_process	Official portal, offline office route and steps exceptions	Only exceptions explicitly stated in official guidelines
source_metadata	URL, document title, date, page/section, access date, verification status

4. Important safety and accuracy rules

• Never tell a user that an alternative document is accepted unless the current official scheme guidelines explicitly allow it.
• Distinguish a document that is mandatory from one that is needed only for a particular applicant category or circumstance.
• Do not infer eligibility from one matching condition; check all eligibility and exclusion rules.
• Do not promise approval or benefits. Final decisions belong to the relevant government authority.
• Do not collect Aadhaar numbers, bank details, OTPs, passwords, or other sensitive credentials in the chatbot. Direct users to official secure portals for such steps.
• Show the date on which scheme information was last verified.

5. Useful distinction: discovery site vs. source of rules vs. application portal

Discovery site: Helps users find schemes (for example, myScheme).
Official rules source: The ministry/department guideline, notification or official FAQ that defines eligibility and conditions.
Application portal: The website where a person applies, checks status, or uses a scheme service. These may be separate websites, so store each role distinctly.

Prepared as a hackathon research reference. Always re-open and verify each official portal before relying on it in a live demo or user-facing answer.
